TALK TO MR. BILL
TAYLOR

savills

work for Savills, specifically the Town Planning sector within the organisation. Planning is about what can be built where and the influence of social, environmental and economic considerations on physical space. Savills Planning get involved in property portfolio advice, urban regeneration, sustainable urban extensions, renewable energy technologies, including wind and solar power, as well as retail, marina and leisure development. RTPI planners have particular skills in planning processes and techniques to influence plan making and decisions over whether a development should gain planning permission. We therefore work on spatial issues including socio-environmental matters and urban design, providing specialist knowledge and advice to clients.

I joined the Planning Team within Savills in 2019, I joined Savills at the age of 18 following completion of sixth form to become an apprentice. I did not have any planning focused qualifications, nor studied subjects in relation to Town Planning, such as Geography. Joining as an apprentice is about your ability to be confident in your own work and ensure that you are always open to learning on the job.
